Why Europe Grew Rich and Asia Did Not

Global Economic Divergence, 1600-1850

Prasannan Parthasarathi

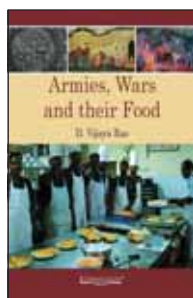

A striking new answer to the classic question of why Europe industrialised and Asia did not. Focusing on divergence from the perspective of the Indian subcontinent, Prasannan Parthasarathi points to the plural paths of economic development which resulted from the very different pressures and needs that Europe and Asia faced.

Armies, Wars and their Food

D. Vijaya Rao

In the history of mankind, armies fought at the behest of a ruler to conquer and expand territories. In due course, war crafts were devised and war logistics were developed. However, armies' food remained much the same as ever for a very long time. Eventually science and technology played a crucial role in bringing army foods and nourishment to the expected level of modernity, commensurate with advancements in other features of the war craft. Armies, Wars and their Food traces the evolution of military rations and provides insights into the concept of nutrition for military from the point of a food scientist.

The principal theme of the book is the historical development of armies and the supply and delivery systems prevalent at different periods of time. Providing a ready source of historical perspectives on the armies, it discusses the role of science and technology in instigating improvements in military ration.

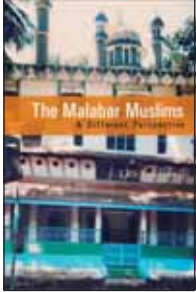

The book will appeal to students of food science and nutrition, army, navy and air force establishments, food industry laboratories and research and development organizations. General readers interested in the history of science and military history will also find this book useful.

The Malabar Muslims

A Different Perspective

L. R. S. Lakshmi

The Muslims of Kerala, primarily in the northern region of the state called Malabar, are referred to as Mappillas. This book is a study of the social and institutional changes of the Malabar Muslims during the colonial period. It presents the Mappilla community in a wider Indian context and analyses its social, economic, religious, theological, political and educational aspects in detail. Particular emphasis has been laid on their women who are socially more powerful than their counterparts in the rest of the subcontinent.

The Mappilla tharavaadus, which are matrilineal joint families, and kaarnotis, the female matrilineal heads of these families, are central to the understanding of the social history of this community. The British colonial system disrupted this traditional social order. The book argues that Mappillas do not per se represent a monolithic community, but show inter- and intra-regional variations and social hierarchies. The position and status of the Mappilla community in the twenty-first century has been compared with its Muslim counterparts in the other regions of the country.

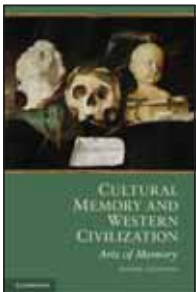

The book would be of interest to academics, researchers and graduate students of South Asian History and Sociology. NGOs working on the social welfare of minorities and general readers interested in the Islamic community of the west coast of India will find this book useful.

Cultural Memory and Western Civilization

Functions, Media, Archives

Aleida Assmann

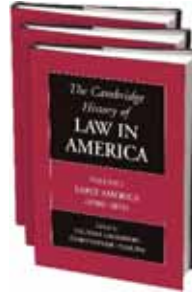

This book provides an introduction to the concept of cultural memory, focusing on the 'arts' of its construction, particularly various media such as writing, images, bodily practices, places and monuments. The analysis also addresses the interaction of cultural memory with individual memory and the ways in which cultural memory supports or subverts social and political identity constructions.

The Cambridge History of Law in America 3 Volume Paperback Set

Michael Grossberg & Christopher Tomlins (Eds.)

Since the 1950s, American historians have produced an extraordinarily rich and diverse literature on the role of law and legal institutions in American life. The Cambridge History of Law in America synthesizes this knowledge, and is the most comprehensive and authoritative account possible of the history of American law.

Politics

The Rise of China Implications for India

Harsh V. Pant (Ed.)

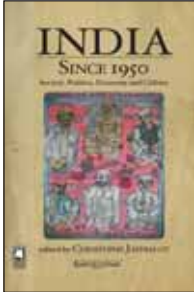

The rise of China as an emerging power and as the most likely challenger to the global preponderance of the US is already having a significant impact across the globe. This phenomenon is being debated and analysed at various levels. In India too, it is generating a lot of excitement. On the one hand, it is considered to be an opportunity and on the other, a challenge.

This book is an attempt at exploring the multi-dimensional nature of the rise of China and its implications for India. The contributors in this volume have examined various aspects of China's rise such as domestic developments, foreign policy agenda, and its position on issues related to India from an Indian perspective. The book will appeal to undergraduate and graduate students of International Relations across the world. Foreign policy experts, and anyone interested in China-India relations should also find the book to be of interest.

India Since 1950
Society, Politics,
Economy and Culture

Christophe Jaffrelot
(Ed.)

India Since 1950 tracks the dynamic trajectory of contemporary India as much on the political, diplomatic, economic, as on the social and artistic front. The non-alignment of the 1950s brought it close to USSR, but the 21st century ushered in an Indo-American convergence. The New Economic Policy of 1991 saw the states of federal India asserting themselves, while liberalization gave rise to a new middle class.

It is impossible to understand India as a separate entity from its cultural diversity. Hence, cultural overtures underpin all aspects discussed in the book. The glory of the Indian subcontinent is marred by intense communal tensions, particularly between the Hindus and the Muslims. This was a result of partition and the contentious Indo-Pakistan hostility that caused three conflicts in a span of fifty years.

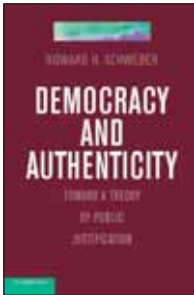

This invaluable book gives readers an insight on India in all its complexity.

Democracy and Authenticity
Toward a Theory of Public Justification

Howard H. Schweber

Schweber argues that justifications based on particular religious doctrines inaccessible to nonadherents cannot be a proper basis for government actions that affect everyone. He develops a model of justification intended to guide citizens in a liberal democracy through the work of creating policies that satisfy their responsibilities to one another.

Marriage and Divorce in a Multicultural Context

Multi-Tiered Marriage and the Boundaries of Civil Law and Religion

Joel A. Nichols (Ed.)

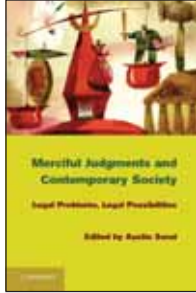

This book demonstrates that common assumptions about marriage and divorce in the civil state are descriptively incorrect, and examines whether more pluralism in family law is normatively desirable and should be affirmatively fostered.

Merciful Judgments and Contemporary Society

Legal Problems, Legal Possibilities

Austin Sarat

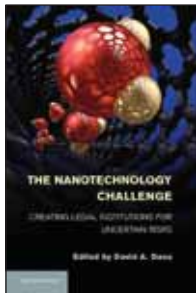

Explores the tension between law's need for and dependence on merciful judgments and suspicions that regularly accompany them. Rather than focusing primarily on definitional questions or the longstanding debate about the moral worth and importance of mercy, this book focuses on mercy as a part of, and problem for, law.

The Capital Asset Pricing Model in the 21st Century
Analytical, Empirical, and Behavioral Perspectives

Haim Levy

Behavioral economics and the classical models in finance, such as the Capital Asset Pricing Model (CAPM), seemingly contradict each other, creating a teaching and a research dilemma to professors in finance and economics. This tension is particularly strong for professors who teach both the CAPM and behavioral finance. This book bridges prospect theory and the classical models in finance to show that there is no contradiction between them.

Archaeology

Social Zooarchaeology
Humans and Animals in Prehistory

Nerissa Russell

This is the first book to provide a systematic overview of social zooarchaeology, which takes a holistic view of human-animal relations in the past. Until recently, archaeological analysis of faunal evidence has primarily focused on the role of animals in the human diet and subsistence economy. This book, however, argues that animals have always played many more roles in human societies: as wealth, companions, spirit helpers, sacrificial victims, totems, centerpieces of feasts, objects of taboos, and more.

The Archaeology of Colonialism
Intimate Encounters and Sexual Effects

Barbara L. Voss & Eleanor Conlin Casella (Eds.)

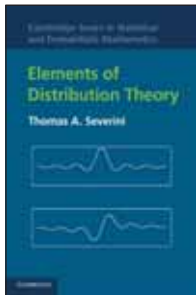

This volume examines human sexuality as an intrinsic element in the interpretation of complex colonial societies. Archaeological studies of the historic past have largely ignored issues of sexuality, embodiment, commemoration, reproduction and sensuality. Recently, however, scholars have begun to recognize these issues as essential components of colonization and imperialism.

Joan in India

Suzanne Falkiner

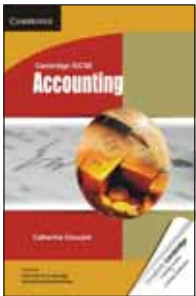

In 1939, young Joan Falkiner's spirited flight from South Yarra to princely India and her marriage to the Muslim ruler of a small state in Gujarat sent shockwaves through the Melbourne society. Political reverberations were felt throughout the Raj and - as the kingdoms were about to disappear forever in the maelstrom of Indian Independence - as high as the British throne. How did it all come about? Through conversations about Melbourne, Mumbai and the South of France, research in the India Official Library in London, and the author's personal journey while travelling in modern India, Suzanne Falkiner traces the course of a most unusual love story.
